FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription 12/21/92

On December 17, 1992, Special Agent [redacted] took photographs of property thought to be 2154 and 2158 North Damen Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and 1362 West Evergreen, Chicago, Illinois. In addition, SA [redacted] took photographs of the northeast corner of Blackhawk and Noble, Chicago, Illinois, and the southwest corner of Ada and Evergreen, Chicago, Illinois. A total of 73 photographs were taken, a log identifying the photographs is attached, and the following observations were made:

b6

Photographs 5 and 6 are photographs of an empty lot located on the southwest corner of Damen and Webster, Chicago, Illinois. The empty lot would have to be 2156 or 2158 N. Damen Avenue if buildings existed on that property, as all even numbered buildings in Chicago are located on the west or south sides of each street. A check of the 1992 Chicago Haines Directory indicates that the next Damen address north of 2154 N. Damen, on the west side of the street, is 2320 N. Damen.

Photographs 11 through 15 are photos of a garage located where 1362 W. Evergreen, Chicago, Illinois, would be if a home was located on the property. The property is located between 1360 and 1368 W. Evergreen, and there are no signs or markings which identify the property. In addition, there is no listing in the 1992 Chicago Haines Directory for a 1362 W. Evergreen. The property appears to be a courtyard for 1368 W. Evergreen. Photo number 15 is a photograph of a building permit which was affixed to the garage.

Photographs 18 through 21 are photos of a vacant lot located on the northwest corner of Ada and Evergreen, Chicago, Illinois. The vacant lot is overgrown, located next to an expressway, and has no signs or markings which indicate that it is a play lot or play ground.

Photographs 27 through 31 are photos of a vacant lot located on the northeast corner of Blackhawk and Noble, Chicago, Photographs 37 through 73 were taken for the purpose of showing that the intersection between Haddon and Noble streets, located in Chicago, Illinois, does not exist. Attached to the photo log is a sketch of the area surrounding Haddon and Noble, where the numbers on the sketch correspond to the numbers on each photo.

On December 15, 1992, Special Agent took photographs of property identified as 2148 through 2152 North Damen Avenue, Chicago, Illinois; 1347-1349 North Noble, Chicago, Illinois; and 1368-1372 West Evergreen, Chicago, Illinois. A total of 29 photographs were taken, a log identifying the photographs is attached, and the following observations were made:

Photographs 6-9 and 14-17 are photographs of 2150 N. Damen Ave., Chicago, Illinois. 2150 N. Damen appears to be an office used by 32nd Ward Alderman TERRY (THERIS M.) GABINSKI. 2150 N. Damen does have a separate operable entrance at the front and rear of the building. It appears however that the front entrance is not being used, as a sign in the window indicates that individuals should "Enter At Corner" (2148 N. Damen). It should also be noted that 2150 N. Damen does not have a receptacle for the delivery of U.S. Mail, which is accessible from the street. It appears that all mailings to 2150 N. Damen, must be delivered to 2148 or 2152 N. Damen Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Rosty's Bank Records Reportedly Subpoenaed

By Michael Briggs

Washington Bureau / Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON.—Personal banking records of Rep. Dan Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) reportedly have been subpoenaed by a federal grand jury investigating embezzlement from the House Post Office.

The latest demand for Rostenkowski's financial records was a signal that the Chicago congressman is a main focus of the investigation by federal prosecutors.

Widespread speculation that Rostenkowski faces indictment soon was disputed, however, by a source familiar with the investigation.

Tucked into Wednesday's Congressional Record was formal notice by Rostenkowski to House Speaker Thomas S. Foley (D-Wash.) that subpoenas were served on 18 aides in Rostenkowski's congressional office and on the House Ways and Means Committee between Nov. 6 and Dec. 31.

The Congressional Record also disclosed that House Sergeant-at-Arms Werner W. Brandt had notified Foley of subpoenas for records but did not say what information was sought.

Lynn Martin's high hopes;

Rostenkowski's personal account records from the defunct House Bank, including deposits and checks, were demanded by the grand jury in a subpoena to Brandt, according to a Washington Times report that a Rostenkowski spokesman did not dispute.

The grand jury also ordered George H. Chapin, the chief payroll clerk of the House, to turn over records on Rostenkowski paychecks that were deposited in his House Bank account, the Times reported.

Brandt and Chapin did not return telephone calls.

A spokesman for Rostenkowski said he could not confirm that the records were subpoenaed but did not dispute the report.

An assistant to Jay B. Stephens, U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, would not comment.

Rostenkowski has denied any wrongdoing, and his spokesmen have said the congressman's lawyers have been assured that he is not a target of the grand jury investigation.

What had been a minor scandal by House standards took on greater dimensions last summer when the grand jury made Rostenkowski and two Democratic congressmen from Pennsylvania turn over office expense records, including those for stamp purchases from the post office. The records that detail purchases of thousands of dollars worth of stamps on behalf of the three congressmen were questioned because members of Congress may use the mail without stamps for official letters.

All three congressmen cooperated with the initial request for records, but later invoked their Fifth Amendment right and refused to appear in person to provide testimony.

Several Rostenkowski aides have testified in recent weeks, and senior aides on his House Ways and Means Committee staff were ordered to appear today before the grand jury.

There is speculation that the grand jury is looking into whether stamp purchases were used to launder campaign funds for personal use.

Confirmation Hearing Is A Breeze For Brown

By David S. Broder

Washington Post

WASHINGTON.—The Clinton Cabinet confirmation process got off to a smooth start Wednesday when Commerce Secretary-designate Ronald H. Brown sailed unscathed through a gentle three-hour hearing of the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee.

Vowing to take a hard line against predatory trade practices and use "sharp elbows" to assure that the Commerce Department is not muscled out of the economic policy debate, the Democratic National Committee chairman and longtime Washington lawyer easily fended off Republican questions about his past lobbying clients and business deals and emerged

Prosecutors Deny Leaks in Rostenkowski Case

Associated Press

Federal prosecutors denied yesterday that they have leaked information about the House Post Office scandal and asked a judge to reject efforts to have them held in contempt in the case.

U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens suggested that virtually all of the information in the news media on the investigation has come from House investigators.

His remarks came in response to an effort by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) to have prosecutors held in contempt of court because of news reports concerning the investigation.

Rostenkowski, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee and under scrutiny in the Post Office case, had accused the prosecutors of leaking information. He asked District Judge John Garrett Penn for a court order to prevent further disclosures.

Stephens said none of 13 newspaper and magazine articles and two television reports that Rostenkowski cited as prosecution leaks in the grand jury investigation could be attributed to himself or other prosecutors.

Rostenkowski has acknowledged that the grand jury is investigating his purchases of stamps at the House Post Office and whether the transactions were used to convert money for his personal or campaign use. But he has denied any wrongdoing and accused Stephens, a Republican, of conducting a political fishing expedition.

Several news reports, quoting sources, have said the investigation has expanded significantly in recent months to include Rostenkowski's tax, financial and campaign records and alleged attempts to obstruct the probe.

U.S. attorney under fire

A federal judge in Washington, D.C., on Tuesday ordered U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens to explain why he shouldn't be cited for contempt over leaks about a grand jury probe of House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill. Federal Judge John Garrett Penn said six newspaper articles and one TV news report "contain information disclosing matters before the grand jury." Stephens suggests the leaks were outside his office. The jury is investigating improprieties at the House Post Office. Rostenkowski denies wrongdoing.

THE WASHINGTON POST

U.S. Attorney Is Ordered to Explain Apparent Leaks About Rostenkowski

By Joan Biskupic
 Washington Post Staff Writer

A federal district judge has ordered U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens to explain apparent leaks from a grand jury investigation of House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski and misconduct at the House Post Office.

Federal law bars prosecutors from disclosing grand jury proceedings, and if Stephens or his assistants are found in violation, they may be held in contempt of court. The resulting civil penalty could be an order to stop the leaks, a fine or, unlikely in this case, imprisonment.

Stephens, chief federal prosecutor in the District of Columbia, yesterday contended that the news stories at issue did not disclose grand jury material, but added, "In any event, we expect to establish to the satisfaction of the court that this office is not the source of those comments." No hearing date has been set.

Since the fall of 1991, a federal grand jury has been investigating whether Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) used large purchases of stamps from the House Post Office to convert campaign contributions and office expense vouchers into personal funds. Rostenkowski has denied any wrongdoing.

Nonetheless, Rostenkowski's legal problems and ethics questions have made headlines in Washington, his home town of Chicago and around the country.

Public officials under investigation typically deny news stories containing inside information about their cases, but it is rare that an individual will bring a legal challenge. It is even rarer that a judge will order a hearing at which the government must respond to the allegations that officials gave out secret information.

But after reviewing 15 exhibits submitted by Rostenkowski in a motion to compel government compliance with grand jury rules, Judge John Garrett Penn concluded in an order late Monday that six news articles and one videotaped news report contained information that revealed matters before the grand jury.

Among the reports Penn cited were articles in The Washington Post, the Chicago Tribune, Time, Newsweek and the Washington Times and a broadcast on Cable News Network.

The order from Penn, who is chief judge for U.S. District Court here, included a detailed reading of all the Rostenkowski exhibits and Penn's account of why the information likely came from grand jury proceedings or sources outside the government team directing the grand jury.

Penn referred to a May 28, 1992, Washington Post story that quoted "sources familiar with the grand jury investigation" saying "a supervisor at the House Post Office has told federal prosecutors that he improperly exchanged postage vouchers . . . from Rostenkowski . . . for cash, in amounts that varied from several hundred dollars to more than $2,000." The judge said revelation of such testimony violates federal rules.

CNN reported sources saying "the investigation has now widened even more to include possible violations of tax law" by Rostenkowski.

Commented Penn, "A statement such as this, revealing the specific nature of the investigation, would tend to reveal matters occurring before the grand jury."

Responding yesterday to the court order, Rostenkowski aide Pat Jones said only that the congressman was pleased with the order.

Plato Cacheris, a Washington lawyer who has defended several high-profile criminal defendants, said, "People do have complaints about leaks a lot, but it's not very often that judges go to these lengths" ordering the government to respond.

Such challenges usually are not successful.

In 1990, a federal judge threw out a lawsuit brought by former D.C. mayor Marion Barry against federal prosecutors, ruling that federal officials did not disclose secret grand jury information. That case involved a 1987 investigation of alleged corruption in city government and a 1984 probe of Barry's relationship with convicted cocaine distributor Karen K. Johnson. It did not involve the grand jury investigation that led to Barry's indictment in 1990.

In the years closer to his retirement, Marshall increasingly assumed a defensive role.

Rostenkowski's Deals On Vehicles Examined

Government Lease Arrangements at Issue

By Kenneth J. Cooper
Washington Post Staff Writer

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) appears to have purchased three vehicles from a Chicago-area dealer since 1987 and then arranged for the federal government to make payments under official leases, Chicago newspapers reported yesterday.

The confusing arrangement, in which Rostenkowski seemed to simultaneously buy and lease the vehicles, could violate House regulations governing the use of member expense accounts. House members are not allowed to own an interest in vehicles leased for official purposes or secure the option to buy them as a condition of a government lease.

The questions about Rostenkowski's financial arrangements for official vehicles come amid a federal grand jury investigation here into whether large purchases reported at the House Post Office concealed an alleged scheme to convert office and campaign funds to personal use. That inquiry has broadened into an examination of Rostenkowski's personal finances. Common Cause recently asked the House ethics committee to investigate Rostenkowski's leasing an office—which he and a sister own—to his campaign committee.

The grand jury inquiry, which Rostenkowski has condemned as baseless, has distracted the chairman as the Ways and Means Committee prepares to consider elements of President Clinton's economic package and his health care overhaul.

The president of a suburban Chicago car dealership told the Chicago Tribune that the vehicle arrangements involved a "direct sale," and House members are not allowed to own an interest in vehicles leased for official purposes or secure the option to buy them as a condition of a government lease.

Rostenkowski spokesman Pat Jones confirmed that the lawmaker's name did appear on the Illinois state titles of the leased vehicles. The Chicago Sun-Times first reported the unusual circumstances under which the government paid a total of $68,250 to lease two vans and a station wagon.

"He came in and he bought cars, and we made a profit on it. We ran a tab on him. We just got a check, as you know. Every month the check came in," said Donald Roberts, president of Wil-Shore Motor Sales Inc. in Wilmette, Ill. He did not indicate whether Rostenkowski signed a purchase agreement in addition to an official lease.

A Democratic aide to the House Administration Committee said that it was virtually impossible for an official lease to convey ownership to a member. The aide, Heidi Pender, said committee staff members scrutinize each lease, strike clauses that violate House regulations and require the leasing agent to report the changes before any official payments are made.

"There is no way an official car vests interest in any member," Pender said. "Our regulations do not permit them to have an interest in those vehicles."

Jones, the Rostenkowski spokesman, said the Chicago newspapers had misinterpreted the vehicle titles.

"They're drawing the wrong conclusion from an incomplete set of facts. The fact his name was on the title did not mean he considered himself the owner of the vehicle," Jones said.

Stanley Brand, Rostenkowski's lawyer, also dismissed the titles as legally insignificant. "A title is an accident of convenience," he told the Tribune.

Under House rules, vehicle leases cannot last longer than two years. At the end of the leases, Jones said, one van was returned to the dealership, Rostenkowski's campaign bought one van and either the lawmaker or his campaign committee purchased the station wagon. Such purchases, if not authorized in the leases, would not violate House rules, Pender said. It was unclear how the price was determined or who the seller was.

House records indicate Rostenkowski reported expenses of at least $1,050 a month since 1987 for a "mobile office," a use of official vehicles more common in sprawling rural districts than the dense urban neighborhoods that Rostenkowski represents on Chicago's northwest
